Technical Architecture:

Brand name, logo, and Gmail can be described as the underlying structure and systems that support the brand's visual identity and email communication. By implementing a well-designed technical architecture, companies can ensure that their brand is used consistently and effectively across all channels, both internally and externally.

Brand architecture elements and objectives